

'Refugees in International Relations'*

Michaelmas Term, 2008

Forced migration has been a major feature of the Twentieth and early Twenty-First Centuries. Conflict, human rights violations, environmental distress, and destitution have led people to flee their homes either across borders or within states. However, issues relating to forced migration have been largely neglected by international relations. The purpose of this two term seminar series is to bridge the divide between international relations and forced migration, mainstreaming consideration of refugees and internally displaced people within political science and international relations.

The following lectures will take place on Mondays at 5pm in the Lecture Theatre, Manor Road Building, unless indicated otherwise:

Friday 17 October, 2pm, Swire Room, 12 Merton Street, University College: 'A Realist Approach to the Strategy of Humanitarianism', Jack Snyder (Columbia University)

Monday, 20 October: 'International Cooperation and the Global Refugee Regime', Alexander Betts (Oxford University)

Monday, 27 October: 'The Limitations of Mainstream International Relations Theories for Understanding the Politics of Forced Migration', Amitav Acharya (Bristol University)

Monday, 3 November: 'International Society, Global Order and Refugees', Andrew Hurrell (Oxford University)

Monday, 17 November: 'Constructivism and Refugees', Michael Barnett (University of Minnesota)

Monday, 24 November: 'The Global Governance of Forced Migration', Sophia Benz and Andreas Hasenclever (Tubingen University)

Monday, 1 December: 'The Securitisation of Forced Migration', Anne Hammerstadt (University of Kent)

Friday, 5 December, 5pm, Seminar Room C, DPIR: 'Refugees and the Regional Dynamics of Peace-building', James Milner (Carleton University)

* The seminar is part of the Global Migration Governance project (www.globaleconomicgovernance.org/migration) and is jointly convened by the Centre for International Studies (CIS), the Refugee Studies Centre (RSC), The Centre on Migration Policy and Society (COMPAS) and the Global Economic Governance Programme (GEG).

Enquiries can be addressed to:

Dr Alexander Betts (alexander.betts@politics.ox.ac.uk) or Prof Gil Loescher (gilbert.loescher@qeh.ox.ac.uk).